

RAFAL GERSZAK/THE GLOBE AND MAIL

His cross to bear

Andy Roper helps to install one of 336 crosses in Vancouver's Vanier Park yesterday, to show how many lives could be lost if the city's Insite facility — North America's only supervised injection site for heroin users — closes down. The number of crosses equals the number of overdoses at Insite between March 1, 2004, and August 30, 2005, none of which were fatal, said Gillian Maxwell of Insite for Community Safety.