

More safe-injection sites needed to aid addicts

The Vancouver Province

Thu 06 Jul 2006

Page: A25

Section: Editorial

Byline: Carla Turgeon

Source: The Province

IMAGES

I believe there should be safe- injection sites in every city.

I recently lost my best friend for the second time. The first was when she went onto the streets of Vancouver nine years ago.

The second was her death from an accidental overdose in May.

The last time I spoke to Sandi, she was in the Vancouver safe-injection site.

She had just used the facility and was getting her needles -- she lived in New Westminster and travelled downtown to visit it.

The worker at the site she was talking to at the time seemed really nice, not snotty or judgmental. She was laughing with Sandi.

That worker had just run into another person we know and had told her to get out of the alley and into the nearby safe-injection site.

I sure hope she listened to her, because I am not sure if she knows that Sandi passed away not 10 days later.

When we were cleaning up Sandi's basement suite, we came across her needles and sent them back to the needle exchange.

If only we could convince users to use the site, it would definitely clean up the look of downtown Vancouver. Keep that site open and open others.

Sandi, rest in peace, my friend.

Carla Turgeon,

Chilliwack

Illustration:

• Photo: Nick Procylo, The Province / 'Norm' shoots heroin in 2003 at the opening of the Vancouver safe-injection site.

Edition: Final

Story Type: Letter

Length: 214 words

Nick Procylo, The Province
'Norm' shoots heroin in 2003 at the opening of the Vancouver safe-injection site.

About Images